Isabelle Habegger's work draws its inspiration as much from her inner world as it does from her love of nature and her interest in what is happening around her. Those inner and outer worlds meet in paintings that combine a dreamlike aura with an intense color palette. Working in acrylics, pigment and resin, the artist creates images that she says are often abstract and symbolic, but which also have a strongly physical feeling. A born experimenter, Habegger employs a wide range of painting techniques — from patterns made out of a series of short, swift strokes to delicately placed areas of color which have the softness of clouds. Diversity in the way she applies her paints is just part of what gives Habegger's canvases their depth and texture. She also orchestrates the colors in her images masterfully, juxtaposing bright shades and dark ones to create a feeling of space and different layers. There is a sense of light coming from within that animates these images, making each come fully alive. Isabelle Habegger lives and works in Wollerau, Switzerland.
